

Singorama

If you're reading this review, you're probably curious about the online singing course Singorama. Well, hopefully, this review will answer all your questions.

Singorama is an online course that says it will teach you to sing with professional quality and precision within 3 months. Quite a big claim. Do they have the goods to back it up?

To answer that question, let me first go over exactly what you get in this course.

There are 28 audio lessons. Each one is quite extensive including warm ups, breathing and posture, staying in tune, the difference between chest and head voice and how to control each, extending your vocal range, recognizing intervals, different song styles and way too much more to go into here. In other words, this course covers everything you will need.

But there's more...They even provide you with your own software so you can record your voice using your own computer. This is where Singorama goes above and beyond a standard course. It also comes with pitch training software that is quite excellent.

Overall, you're not going to get this kind of training for this price. If I had to say anything bad about this course it would be this. As good as it is, if you're not blessed with a functional voice box, there is only so much you're going to get out of this. Yes, it will improve anybody's singing by 100%, but if you sound like a screeching cat to begin with, there is little chance that this course is going to turn you into a professional singer – but you'll have no difficulty doing your party piece!

Just being honest.

You can check out this great resource HERE